

Idol on Duty Narrative Documentation

Back Story:

Constantly pushed towards a corporate job, Aiko rebelled against her mother and decided to become a famous J-pop idol as a way to spite her.

Plot:

Aiko is forced to confront her mother because she has gained ownership of ALL music in existence. She fights through Manami's demon employees to confront her.

Along the way, Aiko has to confront her demon half as it eviscerates enemies in combat.

To defeat her mother, she has to accept both halves of herself, coalescing into a new person. Afterwards, she can appeal to her mother's past to convince her to relinquish control of music.

Character Sheets:

Aiko Kendatsuba

JPop idol by day, magical girl by night; Aiko Kendatsuba is a plucky young woman who's determined to define her own path in life. Half angel and half demon, she has to contend with the violent urges (and bursts of heavy metal) from her darker half.

Manami Kendatsuba

A brutal businesswoman and CEO of YoCorp. Manami Kendatsuba rules over her company with a fingerless-glove-covered iron fist. When she was younger, she wanted to be the head of a metal band before her family and the world funneled her into a corporate job.

She orchestrates the purchase of all music in existence, planning to replace it with boring corporate music. Underneath the cruel exterior, she just wants her daughter to work alongside her.

Demon Employees

Mostly consisting of overworked middle-aged men. Their main motivation on defeating Aiko is Mrs. Kendatsuba's approval, 30 extra minutes of lunch time, or if they're really blessed, a 100 yen paycheck increase.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Ok, the biggest concert of your life so far is tonight.

Just breathe and you'll do fine.

Remember the warm-up you do before every show.

So, there's the classic three-hit melody.

And after that, I do a, uhm....

A down strike!

A leap!

Or a riser!

And as much as I like randomly singing notes, I make sure I follow the rhythm.

Looks like I've still got it!

Well, here goes nothing!

Three!

Two!

Three, two, on-

Demon employees burst in.

Demon Employee

Concert's cancelled, Aiko.

Your mother has requested your presence at YoCorp HQ.

There's a limo outside ready to take you there.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Absolutely not!

Demon Employee

I'm not paid enough for this!

(downtrodden)

Not like I was paid well enough to begin with.

Demon employees scream and run off.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Wow, that was intense.

I've never had it get to that point before.

It's honestly scary.

Aiko shakes her head.

I can deal with that AFTER this concert.

Not the first time she's tried to force a job on me, but this seems extreme.

She tries to call her mom.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Hey, Mom, so uh, why did some balding demon guys, who say they work for YOU, just try to kidnap me?

Manami Kendatsuba

You really are spoiled, aren't you?

You think a comfortable place to do your job and valuable mother-daughter bonding time is kidnapping?

Also, it's not appropriate to comment on people's appearances like that.

Aiko Kendatsuba

What job? I'm a pop idol!

Manami Kendatsuba

...

Not anymore.

She hangs up.

Aiko Kendatsuba

What does she mean?

Only one way to find out.

If she wants some mother-daughter bonding time so bad... I'll give her some!

First Level: City Streets

After seeing a big YoCorp billboard that says "We OWN Music," she calls her mom.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Mom, why are there buildboards talking about YoCorp getting into the music business?

I thought YoCorp just diversified 401ks or something boring like that.

Manami Kendatsuba

If you were a little more business-minded, you would have noticed our diversification.

Now we're in the business of making music, specifically Muzak.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Isn't that just boring elevator music?

Manami Kendatsuba

(offended)

I thought you said you were open to all types of music, Aiko.

You should get familiar with it, as I've heard it's going to be the new hotness.

Or, well, the only hotness.

Aiko Kendatsuba

What?

Manami Kendatsuba

All other music genres will be illegal, as YoCorp has exclusive rights to all music that has been or will ever be.

Aiko Kendatsuba

...

Buying the rights to all music in existence.

Just so you could force me to work for you?

Why didn't you just buy my label?

Manami Kendatsuba

Well, you can never be too safe.

Aiko Kendatsuba

(Enraged)

Are you insane?

When will you stop trying to invade my life?

Just because YOU couldn't achieve your dreams and I could.

I won't be your coworker, and I wish I weren't your daughter.

The sound of a crowd can be heard in the background of the call.

Manami Kendatsuba

(Hurt)

If that's how you feel.

I can explain myself more if you come willingly.

I'll be at the office after I finish something real quick.

Just know, I still love you.

Don't call again.

Manami hangs up.

Aiko growls with frustration.

Aiko Kendatsuba

Wait. Where would a crowd be right now?

...

YoCorp stadium.

Don't call again? Sure thing, Mom.

I was planning on talking face-to-face anyway.

Third Level: YoCorp Stadium

The stadium is full of people cheering.

Digital signs say “YoCorp presents: Muzac is Coolzac!”

Manami Kendatsuba

What if you fail?

What if people forget you?

I don’t want that to happen to my little Aiko.

Manami Kendatsuba

Working with me, you’ll never falter, never fall out of fashion.

People are unpredictable.

One moment they love you, the next you’re old news.

Manami Kendatsuba

You think I just gave up on metal music?

People stopped going to my shows.

I couldn’t go back to performing in bars.

Manami Kendatsuba

I went back to my family because I had no other way to support myself.

You’d be begging for the job security I have once your popularity fades.

All I’m suggesting is that you jump to being successful and skip the failing part.

Aiko Kendatsuba

You think I don’t understand that?

When did you become so concerned with my safety?

Manami Kendatsuba

Because I saw that you were like me.

More than I wanted you to be.

You want to be a star.
